

Do you know a parent who is struggling to pay child support?

If so, he/she may be eligible for Georgia's Fatherhood program.

The Division of Child Support Service's Fatherhood program works with parents who are unemployed or underemployed and are, as a result, unable to pay their full child support obligations. The program connects parents with resources that lead to jobs paying above minimum wage, greater self-sufficiency and more involvement in the lives of their children.

Other services include:

- Driver's license reinstatement (for licenses suspended for nonpayment of child support)
- GED classes
- Short-term training
- Resume writing
- Federal bonding letters
- Assistance with access and visitation
- Job placement, coaching and mentoring
- Support for parents returning home from prison
- Paternity testing and legitimation
